

Jessica Border

My name is Jessica Border and I moved to the DC-area in March in order to work towards building a career in the field of public diplomacy, foreign affairs, and/or consular work.

I recently graduated from King's College London in January 2020 with a Master's Degree in International Peace and Security. The experience to not only live abroad for the second time but to attend university abroad is a strong asset to what I can offer as a member. Not only have I been taught by people with a unique lens in regard to pushing the world towards international peace, but I have developed a passion for protecting people against the horrors of human rights abuses and xenophobia. Being able to engage, first hand, in peace-building, conflict resolution, and multilateral communication is a stepping stone towards achieving my individual goals as well as my long-term goals for lasting peace. I am not afraid to dig deep into these complex political issues.

In my free time, I enjoy traveling (pre-COVID of course), hiking, trying new foods, and spending time with my extended family.
